

CARLA MAIA

Carla Maia graduated in Veterinary Medicine (Universidade Técnica de Lisboa), obtained MSc degree in Medical Parasitology (IHMT, NOVA), a PhD degree and the Habilitation title in Biomedical Sciences, specialization in Parasitology at the same Institution. She is Specialist on Veterinary Parasitology by the European Veterinary Parasitology College, recognized by the European Board of Veterinary Specialisation. Currently, she is an Assistant Researcher at the Medical Parasitology Unit, of the IHMT-NOVA.

Long experience in Leishmania and phlebotomine sand flies (epidemiology, diagnosis, field research, vector-pathogen-host interactions). In recent years she has carried out studies on phleboviruses in humans, domestic animals and sand flies, and agents transmitted by ticks and mosquitoes with zoonotic or veterinary importance.

Carla Maia has acted as PI/PI responsible for the participation of IHMT/UNL in nine projects and in one international network regarding leishmaniasis funded by the EC, ECDC, DNDi, FCT, and pharmaceutical companies. She belonged to the Management committee of 2 COST-Actions.

She has published three chapters in international books published by Springer and over 100 papers in international peer-review journals with an impact factor in the areas of Parasitology, Tropical Medicine, and Infectious Diseases. She has presented over 150 works at Conferences.